Army Says They Murdered Jews On West Bank

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches TEL AVIV - Israeli soldiers killed four Palestinian guerrillas near the occupied West Bank town of Hebron, the army announced

It said the four belonged to a cell responsible for the murders of three Jews, including two hikers whose bodies, riddled with bullets, were found in hills outside Jerusalem on Saturday.

The army said that another guerrilla was wounded and captured in the encounter on the southern slopes of Hebron. The statement did not disclose when the incident occurred or whether the group fired

. The statement said the group had been active in the Hebron, Ra-mallah and Bethlehem areas of the West Bank and was responsible for the murder of a Jewish settler in Ramallah in March.

The army announcement coincided with a claim in Turns that the Palestine Liberation Organization's military command was responsible for an explosion that collapsed a Jerusalem apartment house Monday, killing one person and injuring 11 others.

A statement issued by the Gener-Command of the Palestinian Revolutionary Forces and published by the PLO's WAFA news agency said that the bombing was in retaliation for the Israeli attack last week on PLO headquarters in Tunis in which 72 persons died. In Jerusalem, a police spokes-

Clausen Says World Bank to Expand Lending

By John Burgess and Hobart Rowen Washington Past Service

SEOUL - The president of the World Bank, A.W. Clausen, said Monday that the bank now had political backing from all major nations for an expansion of lending that would probably require a general capital increase within two

His statement here came after James A. Baker 3d, the U.S. Treasury secretary, said before an influential financial advisory body that "resources should be made available" if the demand for loans rose past the World Bank's ability to provide them.

Mr. Clausen said that the World Bank's present resources could sustain lending as high as $14 billion a year, compared with the current $11.5 billion in lending, but that more capital probably would be needed starting in the fiscal year that ends June 30, 1987.

"We are going full throttle at the moment and will be for the foreseeable future," he said.

His remarks came after expanded lending was given formal endorsement at a meeting of the development committee, a panel of 22 finance officials that advises both the bank and the International Monetary Fund.

[The $50 billion - half from the World Bank and half from commercial banks - would be aimed at eight large debtor countries and about seven other countries with lesser debts, the sources said. The loans would be made on the condition that the recipients respond with economic reforms.]

U.S. officials initially considered a $5.4-billion program to be jointly administered by the bank and the IMF that would consist of the $2.7billion IMF trust fund and a like amount of new money from the World Bank.

Instead, the countries of this region are most interested in keeping world markets open to their competitive prowess. They do not want a new deal, just a fair deal.

The core of the region's dynamism is East Asia, dominated by Japan and dependent on U.S. markets to absorb the goods streaming from these export-driven economies. Sometimes, the economic advance is forcing political change. In South Korea and Taiwan, for instance, development has fueled internal demands for political liberalization, which must eventually be accommodated.

"You can't have a modern economy coupled with the stone-age political system," one Seoul executive observed. "The pace will be measured, but some loosening of the political reins is inevitable."

Now, to be sure, anxiety is the mood of East Asia. Growth rates have fallen off sharply for most of its economies, and the United States, the region's lifeblood, is threatening to enact protectionist legislation.

For the so-called Four Tigers - South Korea, Taiwan, Singapore and Hong Kong — a slowdown tends to be defined as annual growth at less than a double-digit rate. Japan, for its part, still ranks as the top performer in logue and a politician. Insights.

By Bernard Gwertzman ... New York Times Service WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration decided not to veto a United Nations Security Council resolution condemning Israel for its attack on PLO headquarters outside Tunis because of intelligence warnings that a U.S. veto might lead to the overthrow of the pro-Western Tonisian government by Libyan-backed mobs, according to administration officials. After criticism from Israel and American Jewish organizations over its decision to abstain on the vote Friday night, the administra-tion moved Sunday to explain its position privately to Israelis and others. The Security Council voted, 14-0, to condemn Israel for its attack last Tuesday.

Debate on Loan — and Austerity — Dominates Country

By Edward A. Gargan New York Times Service LAGOS - Barely five weeks after seizing power in a coup, Nigeria's head of state, Major General Ibrahim Babangida, has catapulted this country of nearly 100 million people into an enormous town

Day after day, on dusty street corners, in tiny shops and air-con-ditioned offices, people are argu-ing, waving fists and shouting about the International Monetary Fund. The debate is particularly acute in the pages of the country's newspapers.

The debate turns on whether Nigeria should accept a $2.4-billion ioan and the rigorous economic austerity measures that would accompany it from the monetary fund to help alleviate the country's acute financial problems.

"IMF Loan: A Tentacle of Capitalism," said The Daily Star. "IMF: What For?" asked The Sunday Herald.

And last Sunday, in a sermon at the First Baptist Church of Lagos, Bishop Festus Segun looked out at General Babangida, who was in the congregation, and said, "Those in a position to take the decision on the loan should note that we already have debt burdens."

The bishop's view is widely held. Business executives and bankers, labor leaders and university professors support it. Nigeria has never borrowed from the IMF. Many Ni-gerians say that taking a loan now and accepting the stringent eco-nomic changes required by the monetary fund would be unacceptable because Nigeria's sovereignty would erode.

"The IMF loan," according to a newspaper column by two leaders of a civil service union, would create "more idle hands which are responsible for armed robberies, bank breakings and many more types of crime waves, coupled with nisery and underdevelopment."

The public discussion over borrowing from the IMF, the likes of which has not been seen since the military overthrew a civilian government in December 1983, was touched off by General Babangida's announcement that he was inviting Nigerians to comment on the country's economic future.

further drop in oil prices. Against this backdrop, General Babangida has said that Nigeria must address the issue of whether to borrow from the IMF or not. Some journalists say they believe he has already decided to accept the loan. But, nonetheless, it is the fun of the debate itself more than the issues that seem to have riveted people's attention.

Nobody could debate at all until four weeks ago," said Arthur Ezenekwe, the Lagos bureau chief of The Daily Star.

"Under Buhari, nobody could talk or write about anything," he said, referring to the jailing of journalists by the previous government of Major General Mohammed Buhari, which quickly chilled any criticism of its performance.

In one of his first acts after taking power, General Babangida or-dered all journalists released from prison. "Now the ordinary man in the street is talking about the loan." Mr. Ezenekwe said. "The general impression is that taking the loan is

New U.S. Space Shuttle Ends Mission EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, California (AP) - The fourth U.S. space shuttle, Atlantis, made a safe desert landing Monday to end its clandestine maiden mission, in which it deployed two military communications satellites. The U.S. space agency said that the shuttle's five-man crew, all military officers, had conducted a series of tests of the spacecraft's systems and said that Atlantis had been "solid throughout the mission."

Although a news blackout was maintained throughout the four-day mission. Atlantis's primary payload was identified by reliable sources as two Defense Satellite Communications Systems satellites. The satellites are of a new type described as jam-proof and shielded against the electromagnetic bursts created by nuclear explosions.

Manila Mocks U.S. Law

Affronts to justice in the Philippines have deepened the despair of democrats over the 1983 murder of their champion, Benigno Aquino. They confirm the cynicism that greeted President Ferdinand Marcos's pledge to pursue and punish the perpetrators. It seems unlikely that those on trial, especially the top general accused of covering up the crime, will be convicted of anything. The Marcos tyranny seems determined to radicalize its opposition.

The judges who have now withdrawn to weigh a verdict against 26 defendants in the assassination trial have been left with little evidence to consider. They themselves barred important, incriminating information with a bizarre application of America's Miranda rule. And the trial prosecutor, in a righteous, mis-placed show of resistance to U.S. pressure, refused to offer other evidence delivered by the State Department from the U.S. Air Force.

The false obeisance to American standards arose when the court was asked to admit the voluntary statements of the former chief of staff, General Fabian Ver, to a prior inquiry. Flanked by lawyers and friends, he had welcomed the commission's questions. He was not a "suspect" and confessed no wrongdoing. But he did falsely deny that his forces had tracked Mr. Aquino's movements. He also made other conflicting statements that struck the board of inquiry as an indication of his complicity in covering up a military murder plot.

The court, citing America's case of Miranda vs. Arizona and other civil liberties precedents, of his right to remain silent, and Manila's Supreme Court agreed, 10 to 3, that his testimony could not be used against him.

If they care, the Filipino jurists would discover that no U.S. court would so construe the constitutional protection against forced selfincrimination. Courts in both countries enforce that protection by excluding confessions obtained without warning about the rights to legal counsel and to remain silent. But it perverts principle to treat General Ver like Ernesto Miranda, a rape suspect grilled alone by Arizona police. No such warmings are required in America of witnesses who volunteer testimony that turns out to be damaging.

Inexplicably, the Manila prosecutor looking to prove a military conspiracy then added to his own burden. He struggled to reject American evidence strongly suggesting that the Philippine Air Force had tracked and tried to intercept the airliner carrying Mr. Aquino to Manila Airport, where he was murdered.

The prosecutor, Bernardo Fernandez, first complained that affidavits by six American airmen were improperly authenticated. Then, instead of asking them to testify in person, he dismissed their evidence as irrelevant.

Mr. Marcos will try to hide behind these allegedly U.S. judicial safeguards and techni-calities to advance his home-grown outlawry. The right verdict is that his legal system, like his regime, has been tried and found wanting. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Three Ideas for Japan

A delegation from the Japanese Diet will be in Washington this week, engaging in the usual careful and skillful political reconnaissance. The delegates will be particularly interested in U.S. intentions regarding trade and Japanese imports. These conversations follow a familiar pattern. The Americans dwell on the tremendous disparity between eastbound and westbound trade between the two countries, and warn that truly terrible things will happen an uncontrollable political reaction - if it continues. The Japanese, who have been hearing these same warnings continually for 15 years, nod solemnly and go home reassured that nothing much has changed.

Perhaps both the Japanese and the Americans can do a little better this time. The real concern in the United States is Japan's failure to take its full share of responsibility for the stability of the international trading system, a system that is absolutely vital to Japan's own prosperity. To be specific, three points:

First, economic growth rates. The American economy has slid into a period of low growth. This is a time when the other major economies - notably Japan's and West Germany's ought to speed up. Both are anxious about their internal deficits and are running in secoud gear. Both can afford to shift into high. It would serve their interests, and the world's.

Next, money. Thrift is a virtue, up to a point. But Japan, a nation of assiduous savers, is now sending its savings abroad - mainly to the United States - in amounts that have wildly skewed the exchange rates. It is time for the Japanese to begin investing more in their own country, a rich country that fails to provide a service as basic as sewerage to most of its people, and leaves cherished amenities such as park land in extraordinarily short supply. Third, the Latin American debts. As a country with enormous surpluses of capital to export, Japan could make a historic contribution to Latin development. Instead of buying dollars and supporting American overconsu tion, the Japanese might more usefully buy pesos, cruzeiros and australs. The risks would greater, but the returns to Japan and the world would be greater still, and not in the narrow financial sense alone. The present imbalance of world trade, with the gigantic Japanese surpluses and even more gigantic American deficits, is totally instable. Those surpluses and deficits cannot be sustained indefinitely. Everybody knows that The strongest industrial countries have the largest obligations to show courage and initiative in working toward a better balance. That means the United States. It also means Japan.

A Bold Gas-Pricing Plan

Federal regulators propose a bold new pricing plan for natural gas that would reduce waste, create efficient incentives for production and save consumers $5 billion a year. It is in everyone's interest - except the producers. who stand to lose the $5 billion and are lobbying hard against it. Will Congress resist them?

Under the current tangle of laws, a thousand cubic feet of natural gas can be sold to pipelines for anywhere from 78 cents to $7. Consumers do not see these wide variations on monthly bills because the pipelines average out the cost of their purchases. Still, the system is unfair and inefficient.

Gas owned by one producer may sell for a fourth as much as another's simply because it was discovered five years earlier. One town may pay half as much as another 50 miles away simply because its pipeline has access to cheaper, regulated supplies. The inefficiency burdens the whole country because consumers with a lot of cheap "old" gas have little reason to conserve.

The ideal reform would be modeled on the decontrol of oil. All price restrictions would be eliminated. Owners of existing price-regulated reserves would get a windfall and a portion of that would be taxed away. But Congress has never been able to legislate reforms that benefit some natural-gas producers and consumers at the expense of others. That is why the administrative fix offered by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission is so attractive.

Under the commission's plan, consumers would retain rights to the cheaper gas currently delivered by their pipelines. But the cost of additional purchases would be charged directly to buyers rather than blended into a composite price. To ensure that the market for this unregulated gas is competitive, local distribution utilities and industrial consumers would be free to buy directly from gas producers; pipeline companies would be obliged to transport these direct purchases at reasonable cost. Consumers would thus enjoy the old benefits of price regulation plus the efficiencies of competitive pricing.

The reforms would, however, be costly to producers, who have been able to sell unreguated gas at very high prices to pipelines only because the pipelines blend it with low-priced supplies. Once the markets for regulated and unregulated gas are separated, producers of high-cost gas would be forced to lower prices for industrial customers, who could otherwise switch to fuel oil.

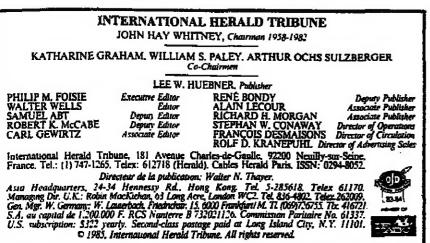

According to Robert Leone, a Harvard University economist, the reform would cut gas bills in 15 Northern states by $3.3 billion a year. Producers believe their total loss in revenues would be closer to $5 billion annually. Not surprisingly, they are working vigorously to block the plan in Congress. The producers friends on the Senate Energy Committee have written a bill to quash the commission's plan. Senator Bill Bradley, a New Jersey Democrat, and Senator John Heinz, a Pennsylvania Republican, will try to save it on the Senate floor. They deserve support from natural-gas consumers and everyone else who cares about economic efficiency.

On Testing, Reagan Is Inflexible

By Tom Wicker

EW YORK - On Oct. 7, 1963, little more than a month before his death, President John F. Kennedy signed the Limited Test Ban Treaty ending nuclear tests in the atmosphere. Observing the anniversary, a number of officials of the Kennedy administration have issued a call for President Reagan to join the Soviet Union in its moratorium on underground nuclear testing during the last months of this year.

They might as well be shouting down a rain barrel. Mr. Reagan does not intend to halt U.S. nuclear testing, either by temporary moratorium or by negotiating a comprehensive test ban treaty. Senior administration officials told Leslie Gelb and Michael Gordon of The New York Times that at the summit meeting in November Mr. Reagan would inform Mikhail Gorbachev, the Soviet leader, of that ongstanding position.

The statement of the former Kennedy administration officials serves, nevertheless, as a timely, if futile, reminder that Mr. Reagan's stance directly contravenes lawful obliga-tions the United States has undertaken in two formal treaties ratified

The preamble to the Limited Test Ban Treaty, or LTB, clearly states that the parties are "seeking to achieve the discontinuance of all test explosions of nuclear weapons for all time" and are "determined to continne negotiations to this end.".

In the preamble to the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty of 1968, subsequently submitted to the Senate by President Nixon, the LTB commitment to negotiations for an end to nuclear testing was specifically re-called and the parties restated their determination "to continue negotiations to this end."

Notwithstanding those national commitments, honored by Presidents Lyndon Johnson, Richard Nixon, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter, the Reagan administration announced July 19, 1982, that it would not resume negotiations with the Soviet Union toward a Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty, or CTB. In December 1982, Mr. Reagan ordered a U.S. vote against a United Nations resolution that all nuclear testing should be outlawed: the resolution carried, 111-1, with 35 abstentions.

Thus did Reagan administration policy override lawful national commitments, and those senior officials made it clear to Mr. Gelb and Mr. Gordon that it still does. It is true, of course, that Mr. Reagan is charged with the national security and has to make the ultimate judgment whether some specific test-ban treaty is in the U.S. interest, and that nothing in cither of the previous treaties could force him to accept a test ban he

But to take the position that the United States will not even engage in good-faith negotiations to try to work out an acceptable test-ban treaty is, in effect, to argue that the national commitments accepted in the LTB and nonproliferation treaties have no force that the Reagan administration need recognize. That is exactly the administration position.

The reason usually given for oppo-sition to a CTB is that compliance with it could not be adequately verified. The weight of scientific opinion is on the other side; but even it verifi-cation were the primary problem, that is a subject for negotiation - for seismic stations on Soviet territory, for instance, since Moscow agreed in principle to such stations during talks with the Carter administration. Also cited against a comprehensive test ban is the need to maintain the reliability of existing nuclear weapons. Again, powerful scientific opin-ion — outside, but to some extent within, the national nuclear laboratories - holds that testing is not needed to maintain reliability; but even if it were, deterioration would affect Soviet as well as U.S. stockpiles. And if uncertainty about weapons reliability resulted from a test ban, that might work against either side's risking a first strike.

The real reason the administration opposes even negotiating for a CTB is its desire to continue nuclear testing - for Mr. Reagan's general military buildup, for the development of new weapons such as the warhead for the submarine-launched Trident D-5 missile, and for what the president calls his "non-nuclear" Strategic Defense Initiative.

'Star Wars': A Dreadful Paradox

W ASHINGTON — Deep in the thicket of arguments about strategic defense lurks a dreadful paradox: Measures to defend population ed on cities.

This paradox is rooted in the conflicting demands of defense and deterrence. Defense aspires to escape from the condition of vulnerability imposed by modern weapons of mass destruction: deterrence seeks to manage that condition by ensuring that no attacker can make himself immune to reprisal. These ambitions coexist uneasily in both American and Soviet strategic programs.

The vision of a perfect shield animated President Reagan's heartfelt call in March 1983 for American scientists to devise anti-nuclear defenses. Advocates of the Strategic Defense Initiative, which is also known as "star wars," have acknowledged the unfeasibility of absolute defense, but they argue that even less-targets. ats such as Syria and the Palesprogram on what it calls the "Mos-cow criterion" — the requirement to destroy the Soviet capital. Moreover, quite modest increases in defense can trigger this shift in targeting. The installation of a small number of anti-ballistic missile interceptors around Moscow, as permitted by the 1972 ABM treaty, meant that more than a few dozen warheads were assigned for possible attack on the Kremlin. This projected change in targeting policy has other implica-tions. An accidental launch now, if it came from the superpower arsenals, would very likely be aimed at a military installation — a disaster, to be sure, but not one comparable to losing a metropolis. The reorientation in target plans driven by unconstrained defenses would mean that an accident would probably involve an ur-ban catastrophe. A defense would have to function perfectly; otherwise. having drawn fire to the city, it would be worse than worthless.

Several lessons emerge: Unregulate ed strategic defense cannot cure the dangers of mutual deterrence; it can compound them. The potential of more discriminating defense — for example, in facilitating reductions in offensive forces by increasing confi-dence that a smaller arsenal could survive an attack — can only be realized if Russians and Americans can agree on what types of defenses are compatible with strategic stability.

President Reagan must determine how best to serve his purpose of curbing the nuclear menace. Through imperfect defenses that increase the number of nuclear weapons targeted on U.S. cities? Or through negotiated reductions in the number of such weapons available to both sides?

SOUTH WARDSBORO, Vermont — Something is odd about the movement on U.S. campuses to organize opposition among scientists to research on President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative. On some campuses, this opposition extends to all defense-related projects.

Advocates of a no-research pledge profess strong belief in academic freedom. But since such freedom exists only in a free society, it follows that commitment to academic free dom entails a moral obligation to support the defense of a free society atened by a totalitarian enemy. Soviet scientists advocating a comparable boycott would wind up in psy-chiatric institutions or in Andrei Sakharov's tragic internal exile.

When Nazism only indirectly threatened America, there was no such movement among scientists. Indeed, some leading figures in today's movement enthusiastically participated in development of the atomic bomb after Albert Einstein persuaded Franklin D. Roosevelt to authorize it. Fear that Nazi scientists would give Hitler atomic weapons galvanized the scientific community into support of defense research.

American scientists have profoundly influenced defense policy. They successfully led opposition to a bill that would have entrusted development and use of atomic energy solely to the military and lobbied for the act that made civil authority supreme. When the United States enjoyed an atomic monopoly, they induced the government to propose the Acheson-Lillienthal plan. This offer, to surrender the monopoly of atomic energy to an international authority, was accepted by all countries except the Soviet Union.

Scientists' pledge to refrain from research on the SDI, or "star wars," is made more puzzling by their freedom to accept or decline such research. No one is pressuring them. They are not required to approve of foreign policy or any federal defense-research proposal. Like everyone, they may discuss and protest.

What explains the difference between the scientific community's attitude when Germany threatened and today when the Soviet Union, a more formidable enemy, threatens?

Perhaps the most important reasons are political naïveté and lack of sophistication about the theory and practice of communism. Most scientists should be aware of the Soviet Union's announced intention to use nuclear arms - a threat voiced after its rift with China.

The effort to enlist scientists against defense research is being used to intimidate those willing to serve their government, to mobilize pressure by building a climate of hostile denunciation, by planned protest marches against laboratories, by obscenely comparing decent citizens us-ing their talents in defense of the free world with Nazi scientists. Such tactics assault the academic freedom of those who disagree with assessments of U.S. society and foreign policy.

Not everyone in the anti-research movement is a scientist concerned only with weapons' feasibility — a highly technical problem where dogmatism is inappropriate. Participants include unilateral nuclear disarmers and those who mistakenly believe the choice is "Red or dead."

Today, we know a great deal about the lethal effects of nuclear weapons. Avoidance of war is more imperative than ever. The SDI seeks to lessen the likelihood of an appressor's attack and diminish the magnitude of devastation of its arms.

Moreover, the Soviet Union is accelerating a similar research program.

If American organizers of the freeze had their way, the Soviet Union would be the only country pursuing this goal.

To their credit, most scientists who have pledged not to engage in space-defense efforts have protested the barbaric treatment of Mr. Sakharov and other freedom loving Soviet sci-entists. Why then do they advocate a policy that increases the likelihood of a world in which they themselves may suffer his fate - or worse?

The writer, emeritus professor of philosophy at New York University, is senior research fellow at the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace, at Stanford, California. He contributed this comment to The New York Times.

Under Reagan, a Dismaying Trend to 'Headlessness' By Philip Geyelin in advance, announcement was made

WASHINGTON — Every day in every way the Reagan administration reminds me more of a putdown administered by John L. Lewis, the irrepressible leader of the United Mine Workers. It was at a critical turn in his war of secession against the American Federation of Labor. "The AFL has no head," Mr. Lewis rumbled in his withering way. "Its neck just grew up and haired over." Headlessness has been a hallmark of Reagan administration perfor- is cast America's president as leading mance in more than enough recent events having to do with foreign policy and national security to suggest that this is no series of flukes: It is a White House way of life. Part of it has to do with squalid power strug-gling, compounded by ideological gridlock. Another part has to do with the keepers of the Reagan flame: At all cost, it must be sheltered. Whether we are talking about big deals (preparations for the November summit meeting, or spiraling violence in the Middle East) or relatively small deals (the "promotion" of the Health and Human Services secretary, Margaret Heckler, to the post of ambas-sador to Dublin), the pattern is the same. The substance and the merits, not to mention the truth of the matter, get lost.

"Heckler's Ouster Shows Regan's

Power." was the headline in the competent professionals stalking Washington Post account of how the White House chief of staff had carried the day, as if this was a professional football game and winning was everything. What Mrs. Heckler's trashing showed was that Donald Regan has the touch of a jackhammer when what is called for is a dentist drill and novocaine. What it also did man in a ludicrous charade. "Malicious gossip," the president said, angrily — as if the gossipers were not the president's men. He cartainly did not think of embassies as "dumping grounds" - when it had been obvious for weeks that the White House was maneuvering for Mrs. Heckler's removal. She had done "a fine job," the president said happily, but he thought "she might like a change of pace." True enough, Mrs. Heckler, stony-faced, did look as if she would have given everything at that moment to be somewhere else. Still groping, the president said earnestly that "we have a need for an ambassador, and Ireland is getting small lies need a ring of authenticity. Not so, the White House insists; if the president's sincerity is not self-evident, how to account for his extraordinary approval ratings in the opinion polls? It may be, as some political analysts say, that Mr. Reagan possesses a certain magic immunity from the credibility gap prob-lems that have confounded other presidents. But there is more to statecraft than approval in the polls. Consider the preliminaries to the summit meeting: Mikhail Gorbachev is all over television, taking the armscontrol initiative, displaying a gift for smooth dissembling, for blowing hard and soft, for hitting the right European nerves in his demagoguery on "star wars." He did not turn the head of President François Mitterrand of France, but his command presence will not be lost on European leaders. And his seduction of European public opinion may well pay off in alliance discord.

Even on economic matters (Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Japan, the United States and West Germany). Mr. Mitterrand declined. That he may have welcomed a chance to declare French independence for domestic political needs is no reason to give it to him. Next, the Belgians and the Dutch demanded to know why a full NATO foreign ministers' meeting was not indicated in the interests of proper pre-summit consultation - the more so since both are in political difficulty at home on the question of deploying the intermediate-range missiles the United States considers so important to its bargaining position in the arms-control talks. The administration belatedly bought the idea. But why did the allies have to beg?

Or consider the fumbling of the U.S. reaction to the Israeli air strike in Tunisia. Some UN Successes

Regarding the opinion column "United Nations: 40 Years Are Enough for a Verdict" (Sept. 28): Charles Krauthammer's comments certainly give one panse. Yet it is the success of the United Nations that is chafing at Mr. Krauthammer's sensibilities - the existence for the first time of a true world forum. The United Nations represents nearly every nation on Earth. With universality must come problems, disagreements, disorder and the other messy aspects of bureaucracy - and the UN is, of course, the largest bureaucracy of them all

Naturally, the "good works" of the UN that Mr. Krauthammer cites are not nearly as much fun to point out as are its problems. He does mention the World Health Organization for praise. Equally successful is the UN Volunteers program, which is recognized as one of the most cost-effective, relevant responses to Third World development needs. Programs like these represent what many of us see as the core of the UN ideal: the will to share, dedication to a cause, and motivation by something more than financial gain

The Pacific Basin is the home of the biggest winners in the economic development game. The Four Tigers are the front-runners, of course, but such countries as Malaysia and Thailand have also made impressive progress. With the difficulties of development having been underlined by the experiences of Latin America and Africa in recent years, the accomplishments of the Pacific nations stand out all the more. So what is the key to their achievements?

To Burnham Campbell, the chief economist of the Asian Development Bank, the answer is free enterprise. "The most successful economies in this part of the world are generally the ones that have followed the free market model," Mr. Campbell said recently in Ma-

'Maria Stuarda' in Vienna Showcases Agnes Baltsa and Edita Gruberova

By David Stevens

International Herald Tribune
VIENNA — The idea of an opera house's unashamedly staging a work as a showcase for two of its leading singers is almost quaint-ly old-fashioned in the era of the stage director's supremacy, but the Vienna State Opera has come up with its first hot ticket of the young season by doing just that.

The singers are the Greek-born mezzo-soprano Agnes Baltsa and the soprano Edita Gruberova, who comes from Bratislava, just a few miles down the Danube in Czechoslovakia. Both have risen to become international stars during the decade or so that they have been and there but every week I combed smoking people telling you how big decade or so that they have been The Village Voice trying to find a you're going to be, pulling out these linked primarily to the state opera, place to play in New York. First, the designers are older and richer. They are all moving into grand establishments that demand equally grand clothes. Second, they are tuned into the U.S. market, one of their greatest assets. Finally, the designers need to change in order to survive, for there is not in Milan the turbulent undercurrent of young talent one finds in Paris, London or New York.

Prices Decline on N.Y. Market

NEW YORK - Prices fell Monday on the New York Stock Exchange in light trading. The Dow Jones industrial average, which rose 8.74 Thursday, was down 4.37 to 1,324.37 at the close. Declines led advances by more than a 3-2 ratio. Volume was about 95.8 million shares, down from 101.2 million Thursday. Prices were lower in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues.

A stronger dollar and a weak bond market Monday also weighed on the stock market, Mr. Nordberg said.

"Before we can see a much better stock market and high corporate earnings, we have to have much lower interest rates and a much lower U.S. dollar," he said. The Federal Reserve's failure to cut the dis-

FUTURES AND OPTIONS

New Strategies Transform Currency Speculation

By JAMES STERNGOLD New York Times Service

EW YORK — Playing the dollar is not what it used to be. Like many other niches of the international financial system, the foreign-exchange market has been transformed by the introduction of futures and options products, and the dozens of strategies they have spawned.

Especially in the last two weeks — following the turbulence in the market after a decision by major industrial nations to force the dollar's value lower — the new strategies have been put to good use by sophisticated investors. Volume in the currency options and futures traded at the Philadelphia Stock Exchange and Chicago's International Monetary Market soared after the meeting.

But the multidimensional new currency contracts have also provided some surprises. Scott N. Dillman, manager of currency-options trading at Bank of America in New York, explained: "There are complications there that sneak up and can get you if you don't understand the variables."

Volatility, as well as exchange . rate, can affect currency contracts.

A currency option is the right, but not obligation, to buy or sell a set amount of a currency at a specified price by some future date. The sell option is known as "call" and the buy as "put." One pays a premium, ranging generally from 1 to 5 percent of the value of the contract, to open a contract. Buying a Japanese yen call—or selling a yen put—would be a bet that the yen will rise against the dollar. But there are important differences between those two approaches, as currency-options players found two

The key to currency options, Mr. Dillman said, is that, while they limit risk, they respond to a number of variables, each of which can move independently. The first variable is what hap-pens to the spot exchange rate between the dollar and the foreign unit. The second is the volatility factor. This is an expectation of how much the currency might swing on an annualized basis and helps determine the size of the premium paid for the contract. The higher the volatility level, the larger the premium.

WO less important variables involve the differential between spot currency prices and forward market prices, and the level of short-term interest rates.

"You can adjust the level of risk you have in the market with some precision, but you have to keep track of all the variables to really have control," Mr. Dillman emphasized.

He provided the example of how a trader might have correctly predicted last month that the dollar would fall sharply, taken an options position based on this expectation, but had a potentially huge profit trimmed significantly by not using the options market

On Sept. 20, the Friday before a meeting of central bankers from the United States, Britain, France, West Germany, and Japan that was held on Sunday, Sept. 22, the dollar traded at 2.91 Deutsche marks on a spot basis. One way to bet that the dollar would fall would have been to sell a put contract on the mark. On Sept. 20, a contract that expired on March 14, 1986, at a rate of 3.00 DM, carried a premium of 2.35 percent, Mr. Dillman said. That means that the trader would have sold a $1 million put for $23,500, hoping to be able to buy it back later at a lower price, and pocket the difference. and pocket the difference.

That premium was based on a velatility factor of 15 percent, meaning that within the next year the mark was expected to finctuate no more than 15 percent either up or down.

By Tuesday, Sept. 24, the dollar had tumbled and the mark had strengthened, pushing the dollar's exchange rate down to 2.72 DM, a 6.5-percent depreciation. That is all the gain a trader with a caching in on Tuesday, with a caching in on Tuesday. Friday, with a cashing in on Tuesday.

German Talks Are Backed

U.S. Seeking Market Access

By Warren Getler

International Herald Tribune
FRANKFURT — The United States has told the West German government that it would welcome talks in early November in Bonn on lecommunications trade.

But Washington has stipulated that such talks must also include an examination of ways to improve access to the large West German market, U.S. officials in Washington and Bonn said Monday.

U.S. officials hope the talks will give added impetus to the Ameri-can goal of including trade in ser-vices, such as some telecommunications operations, in the next round of multilateral trade negotiations under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

We hope that these talks in Bonn could persuade European governments to share our view that government procurement-procedure guidelines established under GATT in 1980 should be extended to include procurement of telecommunications systems by minis-tries," said one U.S. Commerce Department official.

"The proposed talks are not meant to be trade negotiations," the official said. He added that any bilateral trade negotiations would have to be handled in a separate

Measuring South Korea's Economic Uncertainties EXPORTS

Korean Miracle Is Starting to Fade As Trade Curbs Threaten Exports

By Susan Chira
New York Times Service
SEOUL — The South Korean economy is a miracle. In little more than 20 years, a country torn an aggressive export policy, South Korea's economapart by war has become an emerging economic my is far weaker, partly because it lacks Japan's

But the Korean miracle gets its strength from booming exports, and now the rise of world protectionism threatens to undo the nation's formula for rapid economic growth.

The challenge to South Korea's economic success makes this week's annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank in Seoul all the more important. By coming to Seoul, the financial elite is applauding South Korea's accomplishments. At the same time, delegates are tackling precisely the issues that concern South Korea most — trade and debt.

South Korea has moved from a nation of farmers to one of traders in little more than a generation. Men who repaired U.S. Army trucks during the Korean War that ended in 1953 now head conglomerates that export steel, autos, television sets, ships, in addition to semiconductors and other high-technology products. Their most important market is the United States, where South Korean industriousness has already left its mark, from South Korean groceries in New York to semiconductor research laboratories in Silicon Valley, California.
This year, however, will not see record growth for South Korea. Exports are stagnant for the first time in years, and the big industrial companies are being forced to lay off workers. The main culprit is the lagging U.S. economy. Like its neighbors in the Pacific Basin, South Korea's economic fate is linked to its ability to sell to the United States, which buys 35 percent of South Korean exports. The problem of selling to the United States affects Japan too, of course. But South Korea, which chose Japan as a model, is hurt more. While the two neighbors share a common work ethic and my is far weaker, partly because it lacks Japan's large internal market.

We have to face the cold fact that we can't expect the rapid growth rate that we have enjoyed in the past," said Ahn Seung-chul, president of the government-financed Korea Development Insti-

South Korea also faces challenges at home. As part of its march to industrialization, South Korea's authoritarian government has offered the nation economic progress instead of political free-dom. The government now faces growing political dissent and labor unrest. South Korea's $45-billion foreign debt, the fourth largest in the world, continues to trouble policymakers. And the increasing national wealth has made the newly rich people resented by the poorer.

As protectionist sentiment rises, U.S. resent-ment toward Japan is spilling over to South Korea in an unfair way, South Koreans believe. The United States ruled that South Korean color television manufacturers were guilty of dumping, and several other cases are pending. Last year, South Koreans were forced to accept "voluntary" re-straints on steel exports to the United States. And some quotas on South Korean textiles - which accounted for 23.5 percent of all exports in the first half of 1985 — seem inevitable this year.

Yet no one, in or out of government, is predicting that South Korea's glory days are over. Businessmen are moving to stave off protectionism by teaming with American manufacturers. Foreign bankers say they remain confident of South Korea's ability to meet its debt payments and manage

5.2% Rise Seen In Oil Demand Over 6 Months

The Associated Press

PARIS - Oil demand in the non-communist world is expected to rise 5.2 percent in the next six months, reflecting seasonal factors as colder weather begins, the Inter-national Energy Agency said Monday in its monthly market report.

The 21-nation group of major oil consumers predicted that oil consumption outside the communist bloc would increase to an average 46.9 million barrels a day in the first quarter of 1986 from an estimated 46.1 million in the fourth quarter of 1985 and 44.6 million in the third quarter.

The report also said that demand for oil from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, which fell to a 20-year low as the summer began, rose steadily in the third quarter and should remain on a seasonal upward trend over the next two quarters.

OPEC's production rose to an average of 15.2 million barrels a day in September from 14.8 million in August and 14.6 million in July. making an average of 14.9 million for the third quarter, it said.

That is still well below OPEC's production ceiling of 16 million barrels a day.

Working from the agency's figures for projected production out-side OPEC and world consumption for the fourth quarter, oil analysts estimate that demand for OPEC oil will rise to slightly more than 16 million barrels daily in the fourth quarter and 17 million barrels daily in the first quarter of 1986.

Those calculations assume no change in consumers' oil stockpiles in the last quarter and a drawdown of inventories of about 500,000 barrels a day in the first quarter of next year. The agency's forecasts also do not take into account any reduction in production from the Soviet Union, which sells oil to India and customers in Western Europe. European customers of the Soviet Union said last month that they had been informed of temporary delays or cancellations of Soviet deliveries scheduled for October. The agency said that Saudi Arabia's production recovered in September to around 2.5 million barrels a day, after having fallen by about 500,000 barrels a day in August from 2.6 million in July. Iraq's air attacks on Iran were estimated to have reduced Iran's oil production to around 2 million barrels daily in September, of which 600,000 barrels represent domestic consumption. Production was estimated at 2.6 million barrels daily in August.

The study did not address the question of Iran's export potential which is believed to have suffered sharply from Iraq's air attacks on the Kharg Island terminal facility.

The report said that Iraq, the United Arab Emirates and Nigeria all increased production at the end of the third quarter. The agency said oil consumption among major Western nations dropped 2 percent in the third quarter from a year earlier. That compared with a decline of 3.5 percent in the second quarter of 1985. The report said onshore supplies of oil stood at about 2.9 billion barrels on Oct. 1, or 14 million barrels less than a year before. That represented 73 days of supplies, based on demand projections for the final three months of a year. A year ago, stocks on hand represented an 80-day supply of oil.

Ottawa to Add To Powers of Bank Regulators

OTTAWA - The Canadian government plans to "substan-tially increase" the power of regulatory authorities overseeing the country's banking system through legislation to be introduced shortly, the minister of state for finance, Barbara McDougall, said Monday.

These changes will insure that we have the best regulatory system in the world," she told the House of Commons in the second reading of a separate bill that authorizes reimbursement of uninsured depositors in the failed Canadian Commercial Bank and Northland Bank.

The minister gave few details of the new powers to be given regulators but said the changes will include bolstering resources of the inspector general of banks.
But she warned Parliament that the 875-million-Canadian-dollar ($625-million) bailout of uninsured depositors at the two banks that were closed by the government on Sept. 1 should not be considered a precedent.

Thai Group Forecasts Slower Growth in GDP

BANGKOK - Thailand's Board of Trade said Monday that growth in the country's gross domestic product will slow next year to between 4.2 and 4.5 percent from its projected 4.8 percent in 1985.

Last year's growth in GDP, which measures the total value of goods and services excluding income from foreign investment, was 6.1 percent, the board said.

Thailand's largest commercial bank, Bang-kok Bank Ltd., earlier predicted that GDP would grow next year at 3.8 percent, down from its 4.5-percent estimate for this year.

Repayment Clause

CARACAS — Finance Minister Manuel Azpurtia Arreaza has asked creditor banks to accept a contingency clause in Venezuela's
$21.2-billion rescheduling agreein the event of sharp declines

Bankers said Sunday, however, that they believe the clause was a political ploy to divert objections to the agreement from unions and opposition parties.

The state news agency, Venp said Mr. Azpurua presented the proposal Friday in New York to the chairman of Chase Manhattan the charman of Chase Manhattan Bank, Willard C. Butcher. He also had talks with Pani A. Volcker, chairman of the U.S. Federal Re-serve Board. The agreement, ini-tially reached in May, would re-schedule nearly all of Venezuela's public sector debt to commercial banks.

Chrysler and Mitsubishi Plan $500-Million Plant

HIGHLAND PARK, Michigan

- Chrysler Corp. and Mitsubishi Motors Corp. of Japan announced Monday that they will jointly build a $500 million auto assembly plant in the twin cities of Bloomington-Normal, Illinois.

The plant, to start production in the second half of 1988, will assembic 180,000 small cars a year and employ 2,500 workers.

Each company will own 50 per-cent of the venture, named Diamond Star Motors Corp. It will start with initial capital of $150. milion, according to announce-

Arab Group Has Stake in Moseley

LONDON - An Arab investment group said Monday that it had acquired around a third of Moseley, Hallgarten, Estabrook & Weeden Holding Corp., a troubled Wall Street securities firm, for $12 million. Chrysler's chairman, Lee A. Iacocca, said that the final decision on the plant site was made "within the past week."

"It was very close, All four states were very aggressive," Mr. Iacocca said, referring to Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Michigan.

Mr. lacocca shared the rostrum at Chrysler headquarters with Mit-subishi's president, Toyoo Tate. Mr. Tate, speaking through an interpreter, said there was no provi-sion for United Auto Workers union representation at the plant and that he expected local labor pool to be the primary source of workers.

Mr. Iacocca and Mr. Tate said the Bloomington-Normal area had "all the requisites" for the assembly plant. They praised the area's offer Monday to $56.25 a share in transportation and education facil-cash. ities as well as the culture, labor

The plant will produce Mitsubishi-designed two-door and four-door cars with a 1.8-liter or 2-liter Japanese-made engine, the companies said. ### Carlton Group Discusses Acquisition Of Thames TV From BET, Thorn EMI

LONDON - Carlton Communications PLC said Monday that it was holding talks with Thames Television, Thorn EMI PLC and BET PLC about acquiring Thames.

Trading in Carlton's shares was suspended earlier in the day after British press reports that Carlton was making an offer of £80 million $113.5 million) for Thames.

Thorn has a 46-percent stake in Thames and BET 47.9 percent. Carlton shares were suspended at 825 pence each. The group, which nade a before-tax profit of £5.54 million on sales of £21.57 million in the year ended Sept. 30, 1984, specializes in video technology and television broadcasting production.

Thorn's shares, 367 pence at Friday's close, opened 10 pence higher Monday at 377 pence each, but later slipped back to 372 pence. BET's shares opened at 320 pence, 7 pence up on Friday's close, but eased back to 315 pence.

Pantry Pride, which had been pursuing Revion since August, raised its bid to $53 on the eve of the Revion board's decision to go private. That offer was worth an stimated $1.5 billion. The bid of $56,25 a share would be worth about $1,8 billion.

Pantry Pride, which is based in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, said its new offer was conditioned on Revlon's board rescinding an anti-takeover provision it approved Aug. 19. Pantry Pride said it believed Michel C. Bergerac, chief executive of the cosmetics and health care giant, stood to gain more than $20 million under his employment agreement if the arrangement with Forstmann went through.

If you fly first, don't drive second. Audi 200 quattro.

Now there is a car, a particularly exclusive car, for people who really value performance, luxury and comfort. The Audi 200 quattro. Its concept is one of understatement on the one hand and high performance technology on the other. Coupled, of course, with all the luxury trimmings that go to make a car of this class. And as the Audi 200 quattro also comes equipped with permanent four-wheel drive for maximum grip, it can safely claim to be not only one of the most elegant, but also one of the most versatile saloon cars of our times.

South Korea used to be an agricultural economy and the popula-tion was poor. Between 1962 and 1984, however, South Koreans' per-capita income soared from $87 to nearly $2,000. The South Korean gross national product averaged more than 8 percent yearly growth over two decades, increasing from $3 billion in 1965 to $81 billion last year. But GNP, a measure of the total value of a nation's goods and services, is slowing to 4 to 6 percent costs and less flexibility in working this year. Inflation soared and an overvalued currency, the won, hurt export competitiveness. The next year, South Korea's economy contracted for the first time since the Korean War, by 5.2 percent. The point is that the increase in volatility would have had the opposite - and a beneficial - impact on the buyer of a mark call contract, bringing additional gain on top of the windfall from the mark's sudden surge.

"You would have been sitting pretty by selling the put, but not as pretty as if you'd bought a call," said John Prout, head of currencyoptions trading at Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette, "You have to know

MOONSHINE:

A Life in Pursuit of White Liquor

By Alec Wilkinson. 153 pages. $13.95. Alfred A. Knopf, 201 East 40th Street, New York, N. Y. 10022.

By Carl Sessions Stepp

THE SOUTH is full of characters, and the writer Alec Wilkinson has laid hold of an epic one in revenuer Garland Bunting.
Bunting, an alcohol control officer in Halifax County, North Carolina, is a backwoods personality worthy of Flannery O'Connor, an unlikely looking lawman bouncing around in a beat-up pickup with his coon dogs and hunting pals until, at the perfect moment, he craftily snaps his trap and turns another lawbreaker into sucker bait. In this slender volume Wilkinson sketches

Bunting and his work, and, through his skills as a listener and observer, he offers an engaging glimpse of a rural Southern culture that is too often merely parodied or burlesqued.

Rotund and balding, with "a panuch like a feedsack," Bunting is a nonstop tall-tale teller, a voluptuous eater, a wily and compulsive horse trader, a maverick free spirit who shuns doctors and once cured himself of Rocky Mountain spotted fever with medicine he kept for his dogs. He may be, to boot, "the most successful revenue agent in the history of a state that has always been enormously productive of moonshine."

Bunting has found liquor stills in swamps bunting has found inquor stats in swamps, hog pens, chicken houses, comfields, living noons and trailer trucks riding down the highway. He has dressed up like a woman, delivered sermons, peddled fish, buck danced, been a carnival barker and hanled logs at a sawmill—all to outfox suspected moonshiners.

"The thing about all of this is." Bunting explains "the other neonle always have to -

What he is up to mostly is canny conversa-tion. "Garland almost never stops talking," disagning his marks with what Wilkinson describes as "a random streak of nonsensical, scurrious, imaginative, blustery, and occasionally poetic patter he calls 'trash.'

Bootleggers unaware of who he is often like to have him around their outlets as a source of entertainment because it stimulates sales." In the wrong hands, Bunting might appear a stereotypical "Dukes of Hazzard" yokel. But Wilkinson, a writer for The New Yorker, is no cheap literary carpethagger. He minds his manners, throws himself into the action (get-ting an awful case of chigger bites while staking out a still), and delivers a profile that is colorful, respectful and warm. His overview of the illegal whiskey business strikes me as thin, but he suggests that it is thriving.

Policing liquor means tracking down the stills and making buys from the sellers, enter-prises that are always risky.

"These folks are suspicious, and they'll kill you," Bunting says. "They'll shoot the grease right out of a biscuit and never even break the Moonshiners commonly get a pretty good press — rugged nonconformists that they are — and revenuers tend to be dismissed as strait-laced kill-joys. But Bunting, whose sleepy down-home facade masks the instincts and brains of a top detective, more than holds his own in the local-color department.

Whether at the supper table, along on a coon hunt or in the living room while Bunting's wife Colleen plays gospel music, Wilkinson is a careful listener and noticer, a pleasure to accompany on this brief storytelling trip into Dixie.

Although he again missed the title, Prost won more races than Landa and was relaxed in defeat, confident of his talent.

"It would be fantastic anyway if I could be in the running for the title every year," he said before assuring himself of the 1985 crown with a fourth-place in Sunday's European Grand Prix.

This year Prost has won five more races (and was disqualified from a sixth because his car was underweight by two kilograms); he has registered two seconds, three thirds and a fourth and has failed to earn points in only 3 of the 14 races.

His 21 triumphs in 87 career grand prix races mark a success rate far ahead of all other current Formula One drivers. He is fifth on the all-time victory list behind Jackie Stewart (who holds the record. 27). Jim Clark, Lauda and Juan Manuel Fangio,

After capturing the crown Sunday, Prost said he'd like to win back-to-back Formula One titles — something never accomplished since the competition was inaugurated in 1950 — "and why not the Indianapolis 500? Prost, 30, began his racing career in 1972 on the kart circuits. He became the French and European champion before making an instant impact in the 1976 Formula Renault Challenge, winning 12 of the first In the next two years, he won the French Renault Europe and Formula Three categories, and was European F3 titlist in 1979.

The breakthrough into grand prix racing came in 1980, with McLaren, and Prost scored a fifth and two sixth places in that first season. He broke his contract after a year to join Renault, partnering Frenchman René Arnoux. Prost scored his first grand prix victory in France, and won again in the Netherlands and Italy.

He started strongly in 1982, winning the two opening races, but a streak of bad luck (including a turbo flameout four laps from victory in Austria) cost him the title. At the start of 1982, Gerard Larrousse. Renault's competitions chief, described Prost as a driver with "rare qualities, by nature courageous, daring, skillful and resourceful."

But by the end of 1983, Larrousse fired him for another quality—frankness. "In midseason," Prost recalls, "I told the team we had to make progress with the engine or we would be outpowered by the Brabhams' BMW. And we were." Many of his ideas were adopted by

The world title is a personal triumph for Prost. "People don't give BRANDS HATCH, England — Alain Prost's quest for the Formula One drivers' championship, the first ever to go to a Frenchman, was none too easy.

The Heckler Decision

Washington — People in Washington were skeptical last week when the White House announced that Margaret Heckler, the secretary of health and human service, was being "promoted" from a cabinet post to U. S. ambassador to Ireland.

The story circulating for the past month was that the president's chief of staff. Donald Regan, led the "dump Heckler" move-"dump ment because he was dissatisfied with her perfor-талсе. The rumors of the secretary's imminent depar-ture were leaked and then denied by almost everyone who worked for the president. Just as I was about to be swept down by a White House aide who vigorously denied that there was any effort by the administration to force Mrs. Heckler out of her job.

Buchwald

"This is what really happened," he told me in confidence. "The president has been trying for the better part of a year to find a new ambassador to Ireland. He wanted a person whom he could trust, who had the ability to circulate amongst the ruling classes, but most of all someone who could speak the language. That person would be the president's eyes and ears in the most sensitive diplomatic post in the world "

"I didn't realize Ireland was that

The White House aide looked around the room before he whispered. "Everthing that floats down from the North Sea eventually winds up on the beaches of Ireland. It's the perfect place to keep track of Irish exports to the United

He laughed. "The two don't compare. The secretary of HHS is just a figurehead. She's only responsible for spending $300 billion. Her role is to see that the health, welfare and Social Security systems don't get fouled up. A child could do it. On the other hand, an ambassador to Dublin has to be in daily contact with the president and is personally consulted on every decision the White House makes concerning Irish linen."

"If it's such a good job why does it pay $16,000 less than secretary of much better than I do. Reagan can be very persuasive when he sets his mind to it. It's my understanding Mrs. Heckler broke into tears when the chief started talking to her about his relatives who were caught up in the potato famine."

What else did he tell her?" "He said, 'Margaret, never forget this. A president has 19 cabinet officers to serve him, but only one ambassador to Ireland."

I looked at the White House aide. "Then you are telling me no one in the White House had anything to do with bouncing Mrs. Heckler out of her post."

"We didn't knock her out of a job. All we did was give her a better one. This administration has never stopped anyone from getting

Jessica Lange: Every Role an Exercise

By Dena Kleiman New York Times Service

EW YORK - In the film N"Sweet Dreams," Jessica Lange plays Patsy Cline, an ebullient, freewheeling country-and-western singer who struts around in calf-high cowboy boots and is unabashedly chunky.

Lange - intensely private, obsessed about staying slim and so self-conscious about her voice that she doesn't even sing in the Cline could not be more remote from herself. But it was just this that attracted her to the part. "She was direct," said Lange in her hotel suite. "There was nothing hidden or neurotic or with-held. Those are great qualities, something I never played before. Tremendous ranges in emotion that last 30 to 40 seconds. Nothing harbored. Like a firecracker going off all the time. I felt that at this time in my life it was a good exercise as a person to play this character." Cline started singing in the taverns of northern Virginia, was discovered by a Nashville agent and performed such songs as "Crazy" and "Cheating Heart" at the Grand Ole Opry. She was killed at age 30 in a plane crash. At the heart of the film is

Cline's tempestuous relationship with her second husband, Charlie Dick (played in the film by Ed Harris), who is depicted as being alternately delighted and defeated by his wife's mounting success. Weighing 10 pounds more than usual, and with her hair dark brown and knotted with spray. Lange appears buxom in "Swee and far more earthy than the ethereal blondes she has portrayed in such films as "Tootsie." "The Postman Always Rings Twice" and "Frances." Remote as she said she found the persona of Patsy Cline - in particular the singer's absence of vanity - Lange said she identified instantly with the self-destructive streak of Cline's roman-

She said a quest for intensity long plagued her romantic life: "It was a trap for me. As long as it was passionate - either negative or positive - then I knew it was love. As long as it was extreme. That was its validity. As soon as anything became too settled, too

Lange said that since she began living with playwright and actor Sam Shepard, all that has changed. They usually alternate between Shepard's home in New Mexico and Lange's log cabin on a lake in Minnesota, though now they are in New York for several months as Shepard mounts his latest play, "A Lie of the Mind." Lange's 4-year-old daughter, Alexandra, whose father is the dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov, is with them, as is a perfectly clipped standard black poodle. Lange is expecting another child in January. Although she and Shepard have no specific plans to marry, she said marriage to Shepard was "an absolute possibility." Lange said she came to play the role of Cline almost by accident. She had barely heard of the singer when her agent sent her a copy of Robert Getchell's script; Lange said she was instantly drawn to Cline's zestful, childlike personality. She had also been eager to act

She said she found the part "liberating" because, among other things, it forced her to sing. Lange described her voice tersely as "disappointing." Although in the soundtrack the songs are recordings by Cline, Lange would belt out the tunes when portraying Cline onstage.

Beyond still photographs and several old television clippings of Cline, who died in 1963, there was little evidence how she behaved. Lange said she met with people who had known Cline, but they all remember what they want to remember." Almost no one could tell her about how Cline walked or whether she had any special quirks of expression Cline's mother, Hilda Hensley (played by Anne Wedgeworth), provided Lange with the one de-tail around which she found she could focus Cline. It was a simple movement - how Cline would gesture behind her back to the musicians - but Lange said it helped her crystallize the character's stage persona.
